Abstract

The object of the present invention is to provide a management server device that instructs each of a plurality of application devices, which stores a same password, to update the password, each application device providing a service to a user who is authenticated using the password. If any of the application devices has failed to update the password, the management server device instructs the other application servers, which have successfully update the password, to restore the password.